Another couple voiced acceptance of the idea of the residence in their neighborhood. They said, "All we think about is ourselves and our property, have we given thought to how the parents of the retarded feel? By accepting this program in our block, we could show that the almighty dollar is not the only thing."

Most of the questions asked by the Winslow street residents among the 35 persons attending the meeting, including a number of the directors of the association, reflected apprehensions about certain phases of the program. After explanations by Mr. Coughlin or Mrs. Robert G. McHugh, chapter president, there was no publicly voiced opposition evident, except by the few concerned with property values.

Emphasizing that the young adults who would live at the residence would be carefully selected and screened, Mr. Coughlin said they would be the mildly and moderately retarded who "look no different, act and work no differently from the rest of us. We just feel they need 'parental' supervision to continue to function adequately in the community."

The supervision would be provided on a 24-hour basis by a resident couple, with a third person acting as a recreational director for the evening and weekend free time, Mr. Coughlin explained. The association board of directors and Mr. Coughlin would be responsible for seeing that the whole program is carried on properly.

Queried as to the type of recreation, Mr. Coughlin answered that it would be what normal young adults do—watch television, read, play games and cards, go to the movies or other activities in the community. There would be no "playground in the back yard." For outside activity the residents would use the park and such facilities as the Y.M.-Y.W.C.A.

Residents of the neighborhood would not be expected to associate socially with the individuals in the residence nor invite them into their homes, unless they wished to do so. If there were any "problems of behavior" arising with the retarded they should be reported to the association and proper action would be taken, Mr. Coughlin said.

The co-educational aspect of the residence was questioned. Mr. Coughlin answered that it has been proven to work out satisfactorily in residential schools for the retarded.

Transportation to the Sheltered Workshop at the center on Bauer drive, where some of the residents of the home might work, would be by the association's bus, which now takes 50 persons daily from a pickup point in the center of the city. Those working in private industry would secure their own means of getting to work.

Henry Ray Dies at 47

Henry W. Ray, 47, of 206 William street, employee of the Garland City Parts corporation store and a veteran of World War II, was pronounced dead upon arrival at the House of the Good Samaritan by ambulance at 6:35 Friday night after being suddenly stricken with a heart attack at his home.

Mr. Ray, who had suffered an attack in January for which he was hospitalized for a month and suffered a mild attack later, collapsed of a severe attack in the kitchen about 6:15 Friday night and apparently died instantly.

Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Norma S. Grant Ray; his mother, Mrs. Harriet A. Carter Ray, Rodman; a daughter, Miss Janice M. Ray, 19, a student at the Potsdam State University college; a son, James M. Ray, 14, a student at the Case Junior High school; and four sisters, Mrs. Paul (Alice K.) Spencer, Ontario, Ore.; Mrs. Samuel (Ruby M.) Powell, Fairfax, Va.; Mrs. Henry (Beverly J.) Atwell, Dublin, Pa.; and Mrs. Harold C. (Rosina D.) Townsend, Rodman.

His father, Henry U. Ray, dropped dead of a heart attack at the age of 50 in this city on Nov. 30, 1940.

Mr. Ray was born in Cornwall, Ont., Dec. 20, 1920, a son of Henry U. and Harriet A. Carter Ray. He came to this city from Cornwall with his parents in 1923 and had lived in Watertown practically all of the time since.

He was educated in the local public schools and also attended St. Lawrence university extension courses here.

Mr. Ray saw considerable combat duty as an infantryman in the European theater of World War II, having taken part in engagements in the Ardennes, Central Europe, Northern France and the Rhineland and was a veteran of the Battle of the Bulge.

He served in the army 37 months of the war, having been inducted Oct. 5, 1942 and having been discharged at Fort Dix, N. J., Nov. 22, 1945 as a corporal. He had been sent to England shortly after completing his basic training.

Before the war, he was manager of the F. W. Woolworth company store in Carthage. After the war he was an employee of Liggett's Drug store, the Sears Roebuck company store and the Carl's Auto store here, but for the past 15 years had been an employee of the Garland auto parts company. He was manager of the Carthage branch store for five years, returning to the Watertown store two years ago.

Mr. Ray married Miss Norma S. Grant of this city May 2, 1948 in St. Paul's Episcopal church.

The funeral will be Monday afternoon at 2 in the Asbury Methodist church, of which he was a member. Rev. Allan T. Dodge, pastor of the First Methodist church, will officiate. Burial will be in North Watertown cemetery.

Silent Movie Pianist Dies

UTICA—Walter I. Markle, 75, of 130 James street, remembered by silent movie fans as the pianist who provided the music for the "thrillers" of yesteryear, died Friday in a local hospital.

His services were in demand in theaters in Montreal, Malone, Cooperstown, Watertown, Port Jervis, Norwich, Little Falls, Herkimer, and Ilion.

He provided the music accompaniment for flickers starring Mary Pickford, William S. Hart, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, John Barrymore, Harold Lloyd, Rudolph Valentino, Ben Turpin, Ben Blue and many others.

After the introduction of "talkies" he became an orchestra leader and continued popular in theaters and at dances.

Stone Speaks To Fair Crowd Before Show

John H. Stone, Dry Hill road, assistant commissioner of the New York state department of Agriculture and Markets, paid his annual visit to the Jefferson county fair Friday evening, accompanied by Mrs. Stone.

Commissioner Stone spoke at the grandstand before the Jack Kochman thrill show and cited the growth of the fair.

Rev. Msgr. Robert J. McCarthy, Gouverneur, once assistant pastor, Holy Family church, visiting the Kochman show, met Bob Conto, a native of Malone, who is announcer for the drivers. Monsignor McCarthy is chaplain for the National Showmen's association, which Mr. Conto heads.

Monsignor McCarthy is also chaplain for Troop B of the state police and visited with members of that group on the grounds.

The Clyde Miller herdsman award was presented to Susan and Jan Vaadi, LaFargeville, by Miss Jane A. Kiechle, the fair queen. The trophy is given annually to the exhibitor who does the outstanding job in the dairy show of maintaining stalls and animals. Mr. Miller was a former director of the fair.

Miss Gayle Lane, Henderson, dairy princess, was introduced. An audience that overflowed the grandstand and bleachers attended the Kochman show.

Miss Alicia Pope, Smithville, New York state Youth power representative of 1968, was at the fair during the week, being presented at the grandstand.

Jet Bombers To Hit North In Exercise

Air force B-52 and B-58 bombers of the Strategic Air command will participate with air defense forces of the North American Air Defense command in a joint training exercise overflying parts of the United States and Canada during the evening hours of Wednesday and the early morning hours of Thursday.

During this defense training exercise, the aircraft, operating at high and low altitudes, will overfly sections of New York and 33 other states.

Several B-58 "Hustler" bombers will fly high altitude supersonic missions near cities and towns in New York state.

Residents may hear high altitude sonic booms.

NORAD fighter aircraft will simulate aircraft interception missions to meet the exercise bombers.

No interference with normal civic air traffic is expected.

It is expected that, as usual, the Dry Hill radar station will take part in the exercise, tracking "enemy" aircraft and dispatching interceptors jets from bases.

Cruiser Sinks

—From Last Page—

Also sighted, the coast guard said, were eight life jackets, seat cushions, luggage and a paddle, in addition to sections of the hull and cabin.

According to authorities, the craft left Brighton Wednesday about 6 p.m. on a journey across the lake due south to Rochester.

use it for some other purpose or that there would be expansion to an "institution" was allayed by Mr. Coughlin.

He explained that there would be a contract with the A.R.C. chapter of at least 20 years for the operation of the home. Any possible need for expansion of the program would be handled by purchasing another residence in another neighborhood. There would be no change in the Winslow street house.

The legal responsibility for physical injuries which might be sustained by others in contact with the retarded would be handled by the association in the same manner as a parent is responsible for medical expenses, or could be sued, if his child inflicted injury on another, Mr. Coughlin answered to one questioner.

In summarizing, Mr. Coughlin said that the basic objective of the community residence program is to provide a "home" for the young adults whose parents may die or become unable to care for them, to permit them to continue to live and work in the community and not have to be institutionalized.

"It just means that we are asking you to let them live on the block and let them live and work in the community, that these people receive the same privileges as other members of the community," Mr. Coughlin said.

One woman from Winslow then said at the conclusion of the meeting: "Then you want of us is to let live."

Goodell Piling Up Points for RFK Seat

By ALAN EMORY

MIAMI BEACH — Rep. Charles E. Goodell is piling up points here for his choice to fill the United States senate seat left vacant by the assassination of Robert F. Kennedy.

Goodell is fighting hard for liberal planks in the G.O.P. platform that fit the programs advanced by Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, and he is skipping no opportunity to boost the Rockefeller presidential candidacy.

The Jamestown congressman's efforts are being noted with strong approval by New York G.O.P. leaders, both on the state committee level and among aids of Sen. Jacob K. Javits, a fellow platform committee member.

The major obstacle in Goodell's path now, some New Yorkers say, is the question Rockefeller may have about his ability to win a state-wide election on his own. They believe the nod may go, instead, to Rep. Ogden R. Reid, Purchase.

Reid's liberal credentials are more widely known in the state, the Republicans feel, but they also agree Goodell is the more exciting and energetic campaigner.

The New Yorkers here for the convention are overwhelmingly agreed Rockefeller will not resign to have himself named to the senate vacancy, but Rockefeller's penchant for doing the unexpected this year cannot be ignored.

Goodell is generally considered a conservative, but his voting record contains expressions on both sides and, on balance, is more moderate than anything else.

A staunch backer of the Goldwater conservative platform four years ago as a key platform committee member, once the more moderate views had faded, Goodell is now battling with more success for a platform that would well suit a Rockefeller presidential candidacy or, at least, present enough Rockefeller views as a backdrop so that they will be in evidence during the campaign.

Rockefeller may well leave the selection of a United States senator until after the convention, especially with a court suit in progress to block his picking his man.

Goodell concedes no one has been in touch with him about the senate spot, but he is obviously willing. His problem is how to go about getting the nod.
